A VILLAGE OF THE PEOPLE WHO SPEND ALL THEIR LIVES ON THE WATER:, HOUSES OF THE MANUS, Which Are Built on Stout Piles in Wide Lagoons on the South Coast of Great Admiralty Island or in the Shelter of the Smaller Islands. All Materials for Their Dwellings, Even to the Sago Leaves for the Thatch, Must Be Obtained by Barter From Near-By Tribes.

MORE amphibian than the Venetians are the Manus, a South Seas tribe numbering 2,000, for while Venice is built on islands the Manus have no land to call their own. Margaret Mead, assistant curator of ethnology of the American Museum of Natural History, has spent several months among these strange people and tells a fascinating story of their life. Their dwellings are built on long piles near the shores of the Admiralty Islands, two days' voyage from the Bismarck Archipelago, and this tribe is without lands or forests, without gardens, without fresh water, without wood to build their houses or boats, without sago leaves to thatch their dwellings, and without almost every necessity of life. Their one source of wealth is fishing, and so adept are they in this that by bartering their catch they obtain all the articles they need and are more prosperous than their neighbors on land. Though most of their business is done by barter, they have a currency of shell money and dogs' teeth, which when strung serve also as collars and belts.

The Nice Mannered Boy

or Life on a Dude Ranch

ALEXANDER'S mother was proud of his nice manners but the wrangler was not particularly impressed.

Also, the wrangler actually ch.w.d tob.c.!

But by the third day out on the pack trip, Alexander graciously unbent somewhat and helped gather wood. And succeeding days in the open and evenings before the camp fire had their effect.

He learned to tell a cantle from a bridle, to swing a rope. He cleaned his own trout and evencooked them, helped brand a pinto, chased steers, packed duffle, broadened his horizons, and when, at the end of the Dude Ranch season, his mother came for him, she hardly recognized him as her own!

May we help you choose a Dude Ranch in the Montana or Wyoming Rockies? Call at our New York Travel Office, 560 Fifth ive., Phone Bryant 5490, or address, E. E. Nelson, 270 Northern Pacific Ry., Saint Paul, Minn.

Show Windows & Your Product in 760,000 Homes

An effective medium for all types of merchandise.

MORE THAN THREE-QUARTERS of a million responsive, able-to-buy families look into the Roto-gravure Picture Section of The New York Times every Sunday. Their attention is heightened by interesting news pictures gathered from all parts of the world and every copy of the Rotogravure Section is an effective show window for the realistic, persuasive display of all kinds of merchandise.

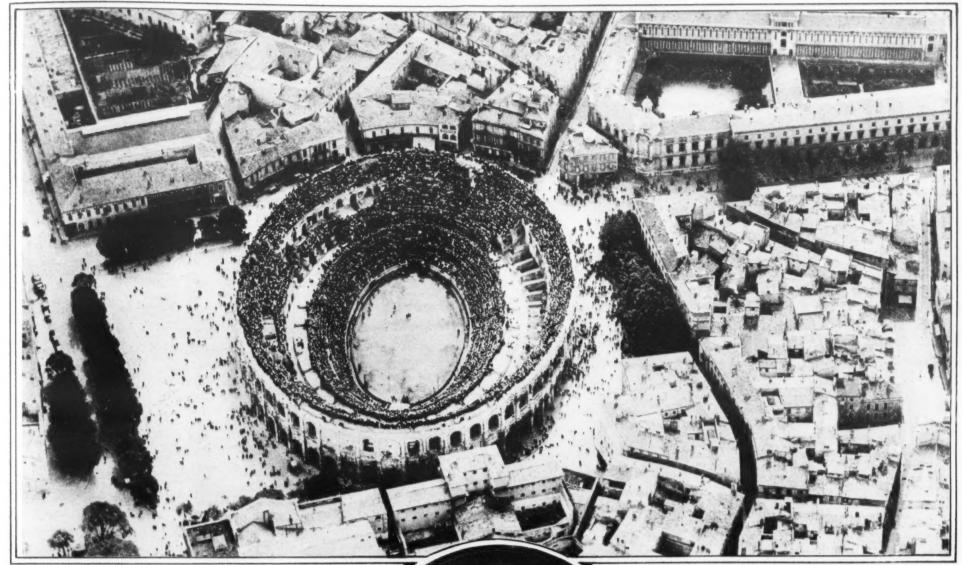

Pictures tell the advertising message profitably—particularly when The New York Times Rotogravure Picture Section presents them to the largest high quality audience reached by any publication. Proof of the Rotogravure Section's successful selling power lies in the advertising record itself. In 1929 The New York Times printed 1,049,878 lines of rotogravure advertising, more than any other publication in the world and an excess of 426,583 lines over the second New York newspaper. This leadership is consistent because no other rotogravure medium can offer advertisers so many outstanding advantages:

- (1) A net paid average circulation now exceeding 750,000 copies every Sunday—the largest high-quality circulation in America.
- (2) Thorough New York market coverage plus national distribution rivaling, State for State, the distribution of leading class magazines.
- (3) Tested dealer influence in New York and throughout the country.

Send for complete information on advertising, circulation, rates, schedules, and results of campaigns.

NTO each one of these 222 short story masterpieces, the daring Guy de Maupassant, impelled by a fiercely burning desire to tell the truth about French life, love and wickedness, has packed enough emotional action to serve an ordinary writer for a lifetime. Now all of these pagan, frank and immortal tales have been collected within the covers of a single, than an inch and a half thick. It is bound in gold-stamped, Moroccograined cloth, printed in large type on the finest thin paper.

Literary Jewels Beyond Price

No other writer before or since has ever given you such stories. No other man has ever pictured French love, hate and passion so accurately and clearly.

Every short story Maupassant ever wrote -222 complete tales—is collected in this one volume, each translated into English word for word from the original Frenchcomplete, authentic and unabridged-for only $2.98. Never, before this book was made, had the world known such a bargain in entertainment. Never before had such a tremendous Maupassant library been offered within the covers of a single handsome volume.
